BUGSY AND GOOEY

ON A SMELLY JOURNEY

The Story About
Unwashed Hair

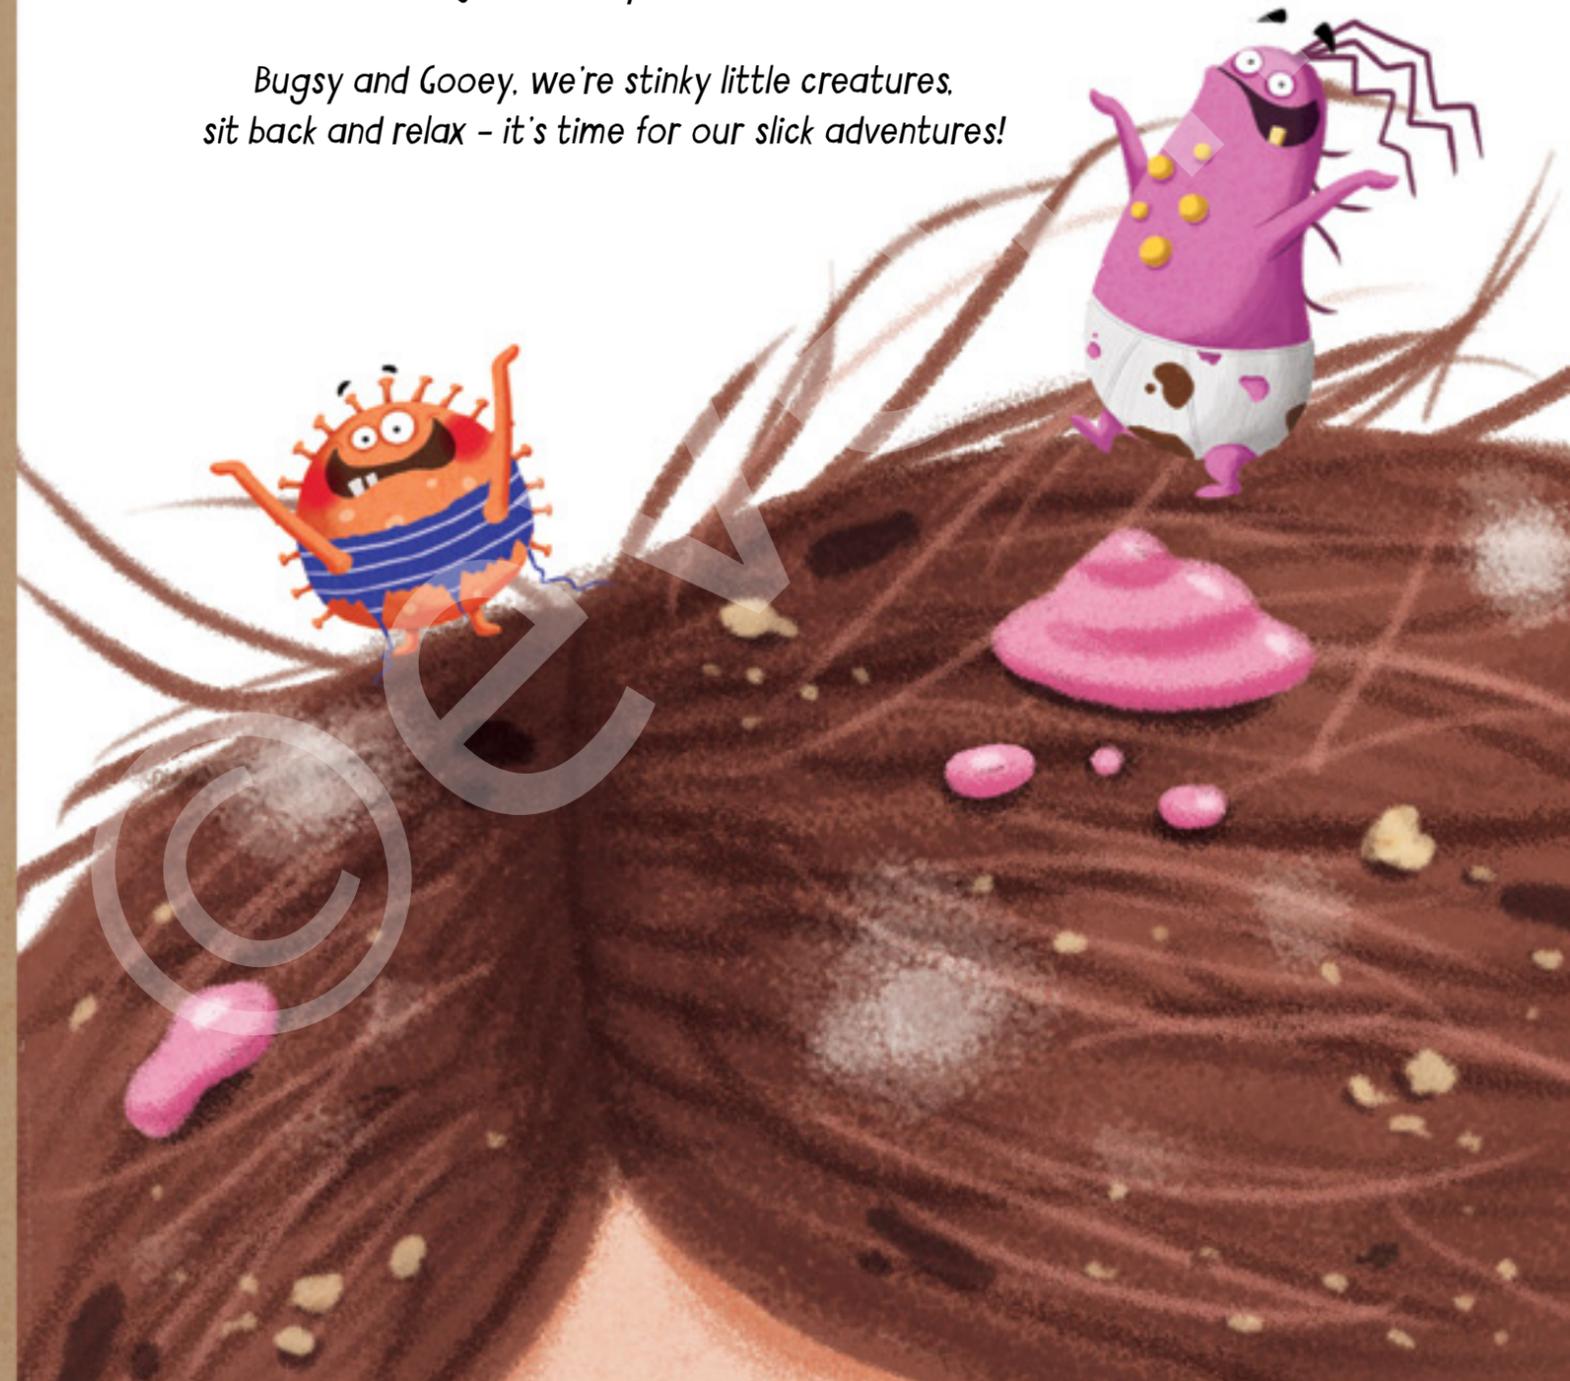

Howdy Yucky!

Welcome to our icky, sticky world!

Let's guess. You love animals and have a room full of plush animals, but you don't like washing your hair?! If crumbs of bread, pudding leftovers, and dust balls, can sometimes be found in your hair, and if your hair often smells like a rhino farted, then this greasy story is just what you need!

Bugsy and Gooley, we're stinky little creatures, sit back and relax - it's time for our slick adventures!

Bugsy barely closed his suitcase, and Gooeys wouldn't even close all the way.

- I packed a bag of yuck and a packet of smears. Did you take the bag of stinky thingies? - Bugsy asked Gooey.

- It's here! - Gooey yelled and opened the stinky bag.
- Everything is inside. The stench of rotten eggs, unbrushed teeth, sour yogurt, and elephant fart.
- Now we're ready for our trip! - they squealed.

Bugsy and Gooley are two mischievous bacteria who love to travel. Going hiking on stinky heads is one of their favorite things to do. That's why this year, they visited some of the smelliest heads in the world.

Ickyish hair #2

This is Slamma the llama. She lives in South America. She's never washed his hair. Her hair is so earthy and muddy that hot peppers grow in it. The kind that makes your eyes and tongue cry.

Ickyish hair #1

This is Juma the buffalo. He lives in Africa. He hasn't washed his hair in eight years. His hair is so sticky and straw-like that a bird built a nest in it and now lives in Juma's head.

Ickyish hair #3

This is a little girl named Rita. She doesn't like washing her hair. She prefers watching cartoons, drawing purple suns, and eating bananas. Rita also likes eating leeks and tidying her room, but she doesn't like washing her hair. The last time she washed it was seven days ago. It's been five days and a whole weekend since then.
