

Jelena Pervan

SNORYBEAR

Illustrations:
Jelena Brezovec

Jelena Pervan

HRKALO

Illustrations:
Jelena Brezovec

For Marina

A very special little bear lived deep in the woods. This bear was the loudest animal among them all. No, he didn't sing opera. He neither hummed nor whistled, but instead loudly, the loudest in the world - snored.

Hrrrrrr-fjuuuuuu!

Hrrrrrr-fjuuuuu!

Hrrrrrr-fjuuuuu!

Since he was a little bear, his forest neighbors called him Snorybear. No one remembered his real name anymore.

Whoever you asked in that forest if they knew Snorybear, the loudest snorer in the world, everyone would point to the chubby, furry creature who almost never got out of his pajamas.

Snorybear's snoring annoyed everyone. During the day, it irritated the digging moles, the hedgehog collectors, and the raccoon cleaners.

At night it bothered the watchful owls, the hunting wolves and the fairy tale writers foxes. Neither earplugs, nor pillows over their heads, nor closed windows helped. When Snorybear snored, no one slept. The forest trembled as if an earthquake had taken hold.

One day mama bear and papa bear decided to invite forest Doctor Beavs Beverson to examine their sleepy bear.

- Why does our son sleep so much, doctor? Is he ill? – asked papa bear.
- And why does he snore so loudly? – worried mama bear.
- Hm, hm... In my whole life I haven't had a patient with such a strong snore. Hm... maybe he sat on a dreamybug when he was little, so he still sleeps all the time like he is a baby. – Dr. Beaverson was thinking out loud.
- How can we help him? – mama bear asked.

- Give him this potion. It is a mixture of the awake plant and burdock awakener. It should work.

