One day Jupiter burst into rage,
he stood there in silence,
like a tired lion in a cage.

Vera had seen it, with concern in her eyes,
She finally asked him, surrounded by stars:
– What happened to you? Why are you mad?
But what she then heard... left her so sad.

There was a lot Jupiter
wanted to say to Vera,

but from his mouth flew,
sharp and narrow,

UGLY

WORDS

like a poisoned arrow!

The ugly words fled through the space,
across the Cosmos, at lightning pace.
They hid behind comets that flared –
some tangled up in Vera's hair.
And one rude word, as story goes,
landed right upon her nose.

Each of those words made Vera feel blue,
so much it hurt – more than Jupiter knew.
And since that fateful night,
she just wanted to be out of his sight.
