There wasn't a single animal, in the whole wide world, who hadn't yet heard about Snorybear.

– Oh, I've heard about this bear, he is the loudest snorer in the world! – duck commented.

– Of course-e-e-e I know about Snorybe-e-e-ar! I've re-e-e-ad about him in the newspape-e-e-ers – said the goat.

– That's right! No one in the world snores as loud as our Snorybear! – his friend fox, called Fox the Storybox, proudly said.

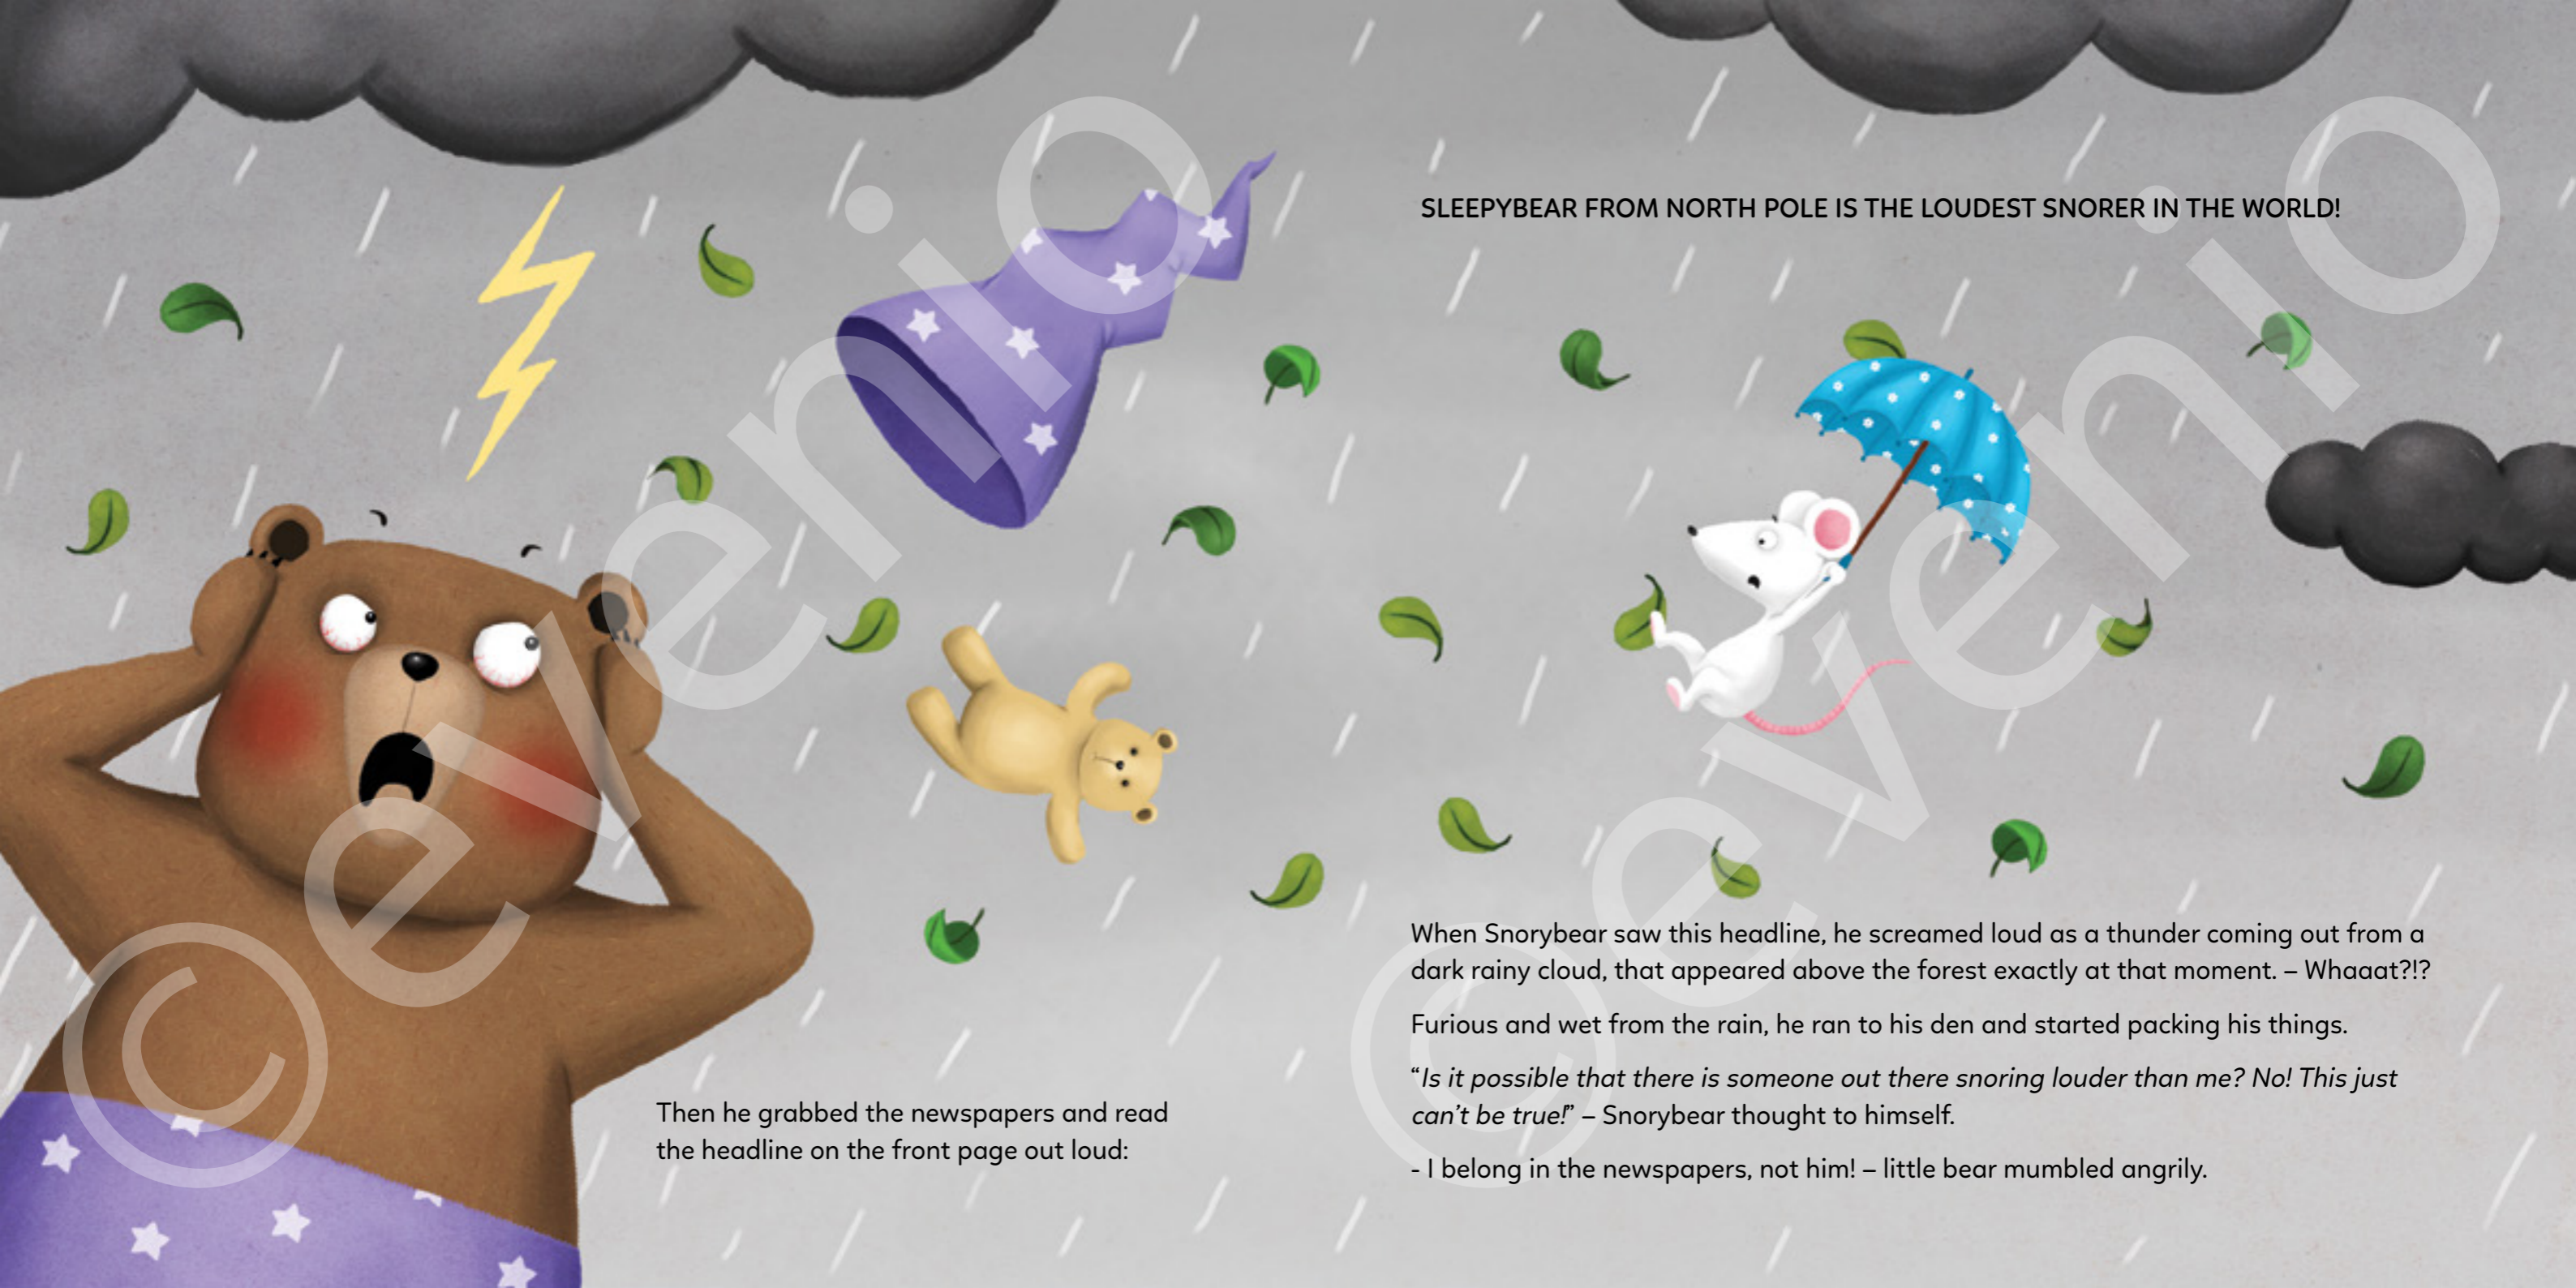

And indeed, Snorybear was famous, and his fame seemed to have gone a little bit into his head. He spent his days walking around the forest, listening to others praise him and say only the nicest things about him.

But one rainy morning everything changed. As the latest newspaper arrived, animals started to whisper around the forest.

- But, isn't Snorybear the loudest snorer in the world? - rabbit was wondering.
- This can't be true! This is the biggest lie I have ever heard. Snorybear shouldn't see this! - the fox was got upset and tried to hide it, but Snorybear was already standing behind his back.
- What are you reading there? Are they writing about me in the newspapers again? - Snorybear asked proudly.

SLEEPYBEAR FROM NORTH POLE IS THE LOUDEST SNORER IN THE WORLD!

Then he grabbed the newspapers and read the headline on the front page out loud:

When Snorybear saw this headline, he screamed loud as a thunder coming out from a dark rainy cloud, that appeared above the forest exactly at that moment. – Whaaat?!?

Furious and wet from the rain, he ran to his den and started packing his things.

“Is it possible that there is someone out there snoring louder than me? No! This just can’t be true!” – Snorybear thought to himself.

- I belong in the newspapers, not him! – little bear mumbled angrily.
